There's a thread over in AskWomen right now asking why women enjoy being dominated in the bedroom. There's an interesting and amusing mix of blue pill poppers, hamsters spinning their wheels, and a few doses of truth buried under a sea of confusion and rationalization.

Check it out.

Florence Nightingale: "Women Have No Sympathy"

75 upvotes | June 5, 2013 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

I've been doing some reading on Florence Nightingale and I came across some fascinating commentary she made to a fiction writer with regards to her misgivings about female nature.

Here are some choice quotes by Florence herself on the nature of women:

I have read half your book thro', and am immensely charmed by it. But some things I disagree with and more I do not understand. This does not apply to the characters, but your conclusions, e.g. you say "women are more sympathetic than men".

Now if I were to write a book out of my experience, I should begin Women have no sympathy. Yours is the tradition. Mine is the conviction of experience.

Now look at my experience of men. A statesman, past middle age, absorbed in politics for a quarter of a century, out of sympathy with me, remodels his whole life and policy - learns a science the driest, the most technical, the most difficult, that of administration, as far as it concerns the lives of men - not, as I learnt it, in the field from stirring experience, but by writing dry regulations in a London room by my sofa with me. This is what I call real sympathy.

Another (Alexander, whom I made Director-General) does very nearly the same thing. He is dead too. Clough, a poet born if ever there was one, takes to nursing administration in the same way, for me.

I only mention three whose whole lives were remodeled by sympathy for me. But I could mention very many others...

I have never found one woman who altered her life by one iota for me or my opinions.

Now just look at the degree in which women have sympathy - as far as my experience is concerned. And my experience of women is almost as large as Europe. And it is so intimate too. I have lived and slept in the same bed with English Countesses and Prussian Bauerinnen. No [other woman] has ever had charge of women of the different creeds that I have had. No woman has excited "passions" among women more than I have. Yet I leave no school behind me. My doctrines have taken no hold among women...and I attribute this to a want of sympathy.

It makes me mad, the Women's Rights talk about "the want of a field" for them - when I know that I would gladly give £500 a year for a Woman Secretary. And two English Lady Superintendents have told me the same. And we can't get one ... they don't know the names of the Cabinet Ministers. They don't know the offices at the Horse Guards...Now I'm sure I did not know these things. When I went to the Crimea I did not know a Colonel from a Corporal. But there are such things as Army Lists and Almanacs. Yet I never could find a woman who, out of sympathy, would consult one for my work.

I do believe I am "like a man," as Parthe says. But how? In having sympathy.

Women crave for being loved, not for loving. They scream out at you for sympathy all day long, they are incapable of giving any in return, for they cannot remember your affairs long enough to do so...They cannot state a fact accurately to another, nor can that other attend to it accurately enough for it to become information. Now is not all this the result of want of sympathy?

I am sick with indignation at what wives and mothers will do of the most egregious selfishness. And people call it all maternal or conjugal affection, and think it pretty to say so. No, no, let each person tell the truth from his own experience."

Accidentally Red Pill: Share Your Story

47 upvotes | December 1, 2013 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

Yesterday I was reminiscing with a friend over some beers about our days back in high school chasing tail and causing trouble. It was a good hour-and-a-half of belly-laughs and shoulder jabs, and it got me thinking about how often I got laid because of "accidental Red Pillery".

You know: making fun of a girl because you just wanted to see how pissed she'd get - flirting hard with her friends just to get a rise out of her - stealing her favourite scrunchie and holding it hostage until she meets you after school. All of the mischievous, forbidden fun which (almost unbelievably) led to sex.

It seems to me that, from time to time, a man can accidentally stumble into Red Pill principles and win the day without fully understanding why. I had such a good time sharing stories with my friend that I thought it would make a good topic of conversation for the community.

So come on: what are some of your accidental Red Pill victories from your less-than-Red-Pill days?

This appeared in my news feed, and I was surprised at the woman's exemplary attitude. Instead of sitting back on her haunches, hamstering people's criticisms of her and letting her weight continue to spiral out of control, she took action and changed her life (and the life of her husband and children) for the better.

Now, there may be more to this story than meets the eye. But on the surface, it looks to me like this woman genuinely loves and appreciates her husband, and thus took proper Red Pill steps towards ensuring the longevity and happiness of her relationship. Definitely a Red Pill example, in my opinion.

307 upvotes | September 4, 2014 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

Here are some fun screenshots from a text conversation with a new plate. I started talking to this girl not long ago and we quickly arranged to meet in a more isolated setting. She was already sending me naughty pics before we had even fucked, and the flirting and pics only increased after we'd had sex. During her first visit to my place she put up only token resistance before getting right into bed with me.

Naturally, her hamster needed a ready reason for behaving like a slut - but she couldn't think of an excuse. So the following day she ASKS me to help her come up with a reason. Hilarious.

Women in love.

Sic Parvis Magna: How to Triumph Over Loneliness and Hardship During Your Red Pill Transformation

82 upvotes | September 23, 2014 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

/u/nowboarding wrote a good post which is, as of this posting, still stickied to the front page. In his post, he touches on how the transformation from Blue to Red Pill takes great time, effort, and patience. Becoming a man in the top 10% is largely considered one of the greatest feats you can achieve among us Redpillers. But it's hard to remain disciplined without at least some intermittent rewards to keep you motivated.

As men, one of the finest rewards we can receive is recognition for our efforts. Given that self-development is a slow process, people won't usually notice that you're doing anything differently, even though on the inside you may be undergoing great suffering and pain as you change your diet, your habits, your demeanour, and your approach to life and relationships. The fact that people can't see all the effort you're going to means you will rarely receive encouragement or praise.

What's worse: The Red Pill teaches us that men are only valued and praised for their achievements. But you're still a novice, an acolyte, an initiate. You're building equity, but you haven't yet had the time or experience to really achieve something worth praise. It's idiosyncratic. The time in your life when you most need encouragement is also the time in your life when you are least likely to get it.

Now, it's easy to say "fuck what other people think", but let's be real here: it's nice to hear praise. It feels good when someone takes notice of all the effort you're going through. Unless you're a dyed-in-the-wool psychopath with no capacity for empathy whatsoever, peer recognition is a powerful motivator. It renews your determination and keeps you on track in your self-development. It's a big boost. And for a feat as daunting as rebuilding an entire life, a certain amount of positive feedback is necessary in order to overcome the occasional setbacks, momentary defeats, and painstaking tedium.

So, how the hell do you deal with the loneliness and neglect that inevitably threatens to make you stray off the path to becoming the man you were always meant to be?

The answer is this: don't take the journey alone.

1) Share the company of men whose lives you wish to have, and learn by example.

Surround yourself with the kind of men you admire. Men with skill and talent. Men with determination and courage. Men with big social networks in fields/industries that you wish to pursue. Spend your free time in their company, and learn by watching, analyzing, and mimicking.

Where do you go to find men like these? Look in your place of work, your family, your church, your school, or local community groups. The internet is also a beautiful tool in this regard. There are thousands of forums and communities out there where guys get together to talk about the things they love. You must be proactive and reach out. Try to focus on subjects with a predominantly-male user base.

As an example, I joined up with a community of guys who like knives, flashlights, multi-tools, guns, bags, paintball/airsoft, motorcycles, men's jewelry, and other guy interests. It's a tightly-knit community populated by a lot of masculine men who take their gender roles, their work, and their hobbies very seriously. I spend a lot of leisure time hanging out with them, sharing stories and showing off new knives and toys.

And remember, just because you're not accomplished in something doesn't mean you can't be a student to a man who is. Many men take great pride in being able to teach, and if you prove to be both friendly and attentive they'll often appreciate the opportunity to be a mentor.

2) Spend time with friends who are also building themselves up.

The other thing you can do to keep yourself disciplined is to hang out with other Red Pill friends who are also in the process of rebuilding themselves. It works the same way as having a workout partner - and sometimes they literally will be a workout partner. By confronting the same challenge of self-development, you can hold each other accountable for your workouts, wing for each other when you go out, point out flaws in each others' approaches/body language, and monitor each others' progress.

Alternatively, if you don't have any friends who are Red Pill at present, you can begin rehabilitating those friends who you believe to have the most potential to awaken. Introduce them gradually. Begin by inviting them to be a workout partner, or to help you restore a car every Thursday afternoon - something with a set schedule and regular meetings. When you hang out, offer Red Pill insights whenever the subjects of women, dating, sex, or self-improvement come up. It is often said there is no better way to learn something than by teaching it, so take it as an opportunity to test your mastery of the basics and see if a novice can learn from you.

As your friend gains a foothold and accepts the Red Pill, he can become a peer and together you can continue to hold one another accountable for your progress.

3. Never stop approaching, even during your developmental years.

This is fucking key. You should never stop approaching women. You may feel tempted to use your self-perceived low SMV as an excuse to hold off on practicing your approaches. DON'T. This is a pussy-bitch rationalization around confronting your social anxiety.

Get out there and interact with women. Take every conversation with a woman as an opportunity to learn something. Flirt with every woman you talk with, even if you have no intention of bedding her - just do it for the practice. If AWALT, then all interactions with women can be templated into a working format from which you can repetitively gain insight and experience.

Remember, it's difficult to put a hard number to someone's SMV. And even so, people don't react to your SMV. They react to their perception of your SMV. This is where the philosophy of fake it til you make it comes into play.

As you go through the process of becoming the man you want to be, ask yourself: how does that man walk? How does that man talk? How does he approach women? How does he behave under pressure? What are some of his most basic, fundamental beliefs about sex, relationships, duty, responsibility, morality? Then, take your answers to these questions and begin LIVING them. Adopt them as your own. You will discover that as you adopt these beliefs and holdfast to them, they slowly become a part of you. As you wear a mask, it eventually becomes your real face, affecting your demeanour and your attitude. This fact is tragically true of Blue Pillers and explains why they're unmasculine in spite of their natural instincts...but it also explains how you can overcome the female agenda's plan for you, and become the man you were always meant to be.

The truth is, self-development only truly ends when you set foot in the grave. You'll always try and use the excuse that you're not good enough yet, that you still have progress to make before you'll be good enough to approach women. Stow that bullshit right now.

Most importantly of all, don't keep your eyes fixed on the horizon. It's a daunting thing to look at how far you still have to go. And no matter how good you get, there will always be ways for you to improve.

Don't look at how far you have left to go. Instead, look at how far you've come. That should be the meter stick of your progress. Keep your eyes closer to the present, and find ways to enjoy what you're doing right now. It will make the journey feel much less intimidating - and I guarantee you, one day you'll suddenly notice how different your life seems, how confident and comfortable you feel, how beautiful your girlfriends are, how many people seem to look up to you. You will feel fulfillment. REAL fulfillment.

And the rest of the world will be in awe of the man you are. The man you were always meant to be.

Sic parvis magna. Greatness from small beginnings.

Transgender (M2F) MMA Fighter Grievously Injures Female Opponent. This is Feminism's Equality at Work.

148 upvotes | September 25, 2014 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

Transgender Mixed martial arts fighter Fallon Fox grievously injures his natural-born female opponent Tamikka Brents in a bout that lasts only one round.

This is what happens when you argue with reality.

Here's what I find amusing - typically in the case of sex changes, political correctness demands that we refer to the transgender individual by their new sex - in this case, everyone should be referring to Fallon Fox as "she".

But a woman was injured, a REAL woman - broken face and a concussion. Suddenly, Fallon Fox is a man once again.

So, we now understand the social hierarchy in even greater resolution:

Women > Transwoman > Men

Here's an interesting moral quandary for political correctness: where on this scale do transmen fit?

Given that Feminist Priority of Blame™ passes over women every time practical reality squashes wishful thinking, my guess would be that transmen (F2M) would be placed right after women. After all, they're still women deep down inside. Except when they're not.

All we need is some woman willing to get a sex change and enter the men's fighting league, and we can test this theory.

Any takers?

Hooked On Real Talk: Could Spending Too Much Time on TRP Limit Your Social Advancement?

172 upvotes | September 27, 2014 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

So, you've taken the Red Pill. You've had your eyes opened. The truth of the world is slowly coming into clearer resolution. You're starting to see and understand the code that underlies every social and sexual interaction. You're developing an acceptance (and maybe even an appreciation) for the transactional nature of every interaction you have with other people.

Most importantly of all though, you're finally in touch with members of an awakened community. These people were trapped in the Matrix, they shared in the same delusions, they suffered similar losses and humiliation, and they managed to free themselves. They get it. It's possible that you've spent your whole life trying (unsuccessfully) to communicate with people in Real Talk, only to be spurned for your gracelessness and cold, hard reasoning. And now you've finally found a community where speaking truthfully is not only possible, but encouraged.

The Red Pill can feel like a haven at times - a place of rationality, where people speak to one another directly without ulterior motive or hostile intent. So naturally, you want to spend as much time here as possible, speaking with ease and comfort in a place where everything makes sense and risk and deception don't factor into the equation.

But here's an idea I want to put out there: Regardless of your own awakening, the world is still populated mostly by people who maintain The Collaborative Delusion and communicate with one another in the language of Pretty Lies. And these people are also the ones in possession of the things you want in life - the money, the status, the power, and the subservience to your will. In order to wrest these things from their grasp, you must interact with them, and like it or not, these people will move to block you if you dare to shatter their tenuous illusion with the guileless tones of Real Talk.

If your goal in life is to achieve wealth and success, then you must plug yourself back into the Matrix and speak its language once again - not as a recaptured slave, but as an awakened man whose goal is to covertly seize power, now free of the shackles that previously inhibited your manoeuvres.

We were all fluent in the language of Pretty Lies at some point in our lives - because we BELIEVED the lies. But unplugging from the Matrix changes all that. Your grasp of the language weakens as you gain a foothold in reality. And the more awakened you become, the more unclean and demeaning it can feel to hear the language (much less speak it yourself).

But speak it you must. It is the only language that the indoctrinated can hear without breaking into paroxysms of denial and hatred. Like any language, you only become fluent in Pretty Lies by speaking it. And the longer you spend in havens of Real Talk, the less practice you will have becoming fluent.

I posit that we treat Red Pill communities like this one as a sort of break room. You can come here to swap theories, insights, and amusing anecdotes by the water cooler. But you cannot live here. The break room is not where you make your money. If you wish to grow in power and influence, you must set aside your pride, steel your nerves, and plug back in, this time as an unshackled man with his eyes wide open.

The following link is to a short comic by Matt Rhodes, a fella some of you may know from his concept artwork on the Mass Effect series. In the comic, we follow a man on an epic journey to overcome hardship.

Click the link and read the comic before reading any further. You don't want to spoil the ending for yourself.

Our protagonist is an everyman. He's still indoctrinated by Bluepill ideology. A decent guy who just wants to bring a flower and a smile to a pretty girl. But he doesn't understand the way attraction works. The girl knows this, and decides to fuck him. Tells him she doesn't like the flower he brought her, and sends him off to find a different one. He dutifully obeys like a good orbiter.

But the practical joke never plays out, because while our hero is away looking for the flower, the girl ends up riding off with a wealthy and powerful cult leader, enticed by riches and the scent of the dangerous.

So our protagonist sets out on a quest to rescue her. It's a beta-minded sentiment to be sure, but it works as an allegory for anything that you're willing to fight, sacrifice and persevere for. In spite of all the setbacks, all the momentary defeats, all of the pain and shame he must endure, he fights on, undeterred. Instead of giving up or letting himself become overwhelmed, he remains focused. He sizes up what he needs to do to overcome the current obstacle so that he can continue on his main quest. That's how you devour enormous undertakings - one bite at a time.

Finally (the comic implies that this is many years later), he is reunited with the girl, and his quest appears to be nearing its end. Only now, he becomes disillusioned. He realizes that he held a false ideal in his mind throughout his entire quest. She's ugly. And not just on the outside, but her very core disgusts him.

It might seem like a low point for him, since he was mistaken about women all along, and all his effort has been for naught. But lo, as he is backing away from the hag in disgust, he catches a glimpse of himself in the mirror. A glimpse of the man that he has transformed into. He becomes at once enlightened and sets off to begin a new quest, stronger and freer than he could have imagined.

The lesson of this comic? Women will come and go, but your quest will always be your quest, and your strength will always grow with effort. Make your quest your greatest purpose, and enjoy women along the way. It is the way of men.

Successful business woman doesn't feel like a woman because too many of her male peers respect her.

522 upvotes | November 9, 2014 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

There's an interesting discussion going on over at /r/AskMen.

<https://archive.today/zMSqc>

A businesswoman thinks she is undateable "because people want to work for her". Let's examine her words through a Red Pill lense.

I'm a 20-something Female CEO of a 7 person company, and two of my employees (male, late 20's) are from an old-money crowd in the city we're in. We'll go to fundraisers and events constantly, and it's obvious that they talk to me about other girls as if I'm one of the guys.

Every ambitious woman's dream: to join the ranks of the women who are considered "one of the guys."

for example, one of them who I haven't met will start to hit on me, and I've seen said guy be pulled aside and "informed" about who I am, and then it becomes all business, and it's like I'm no-go territory.

But what's this? Suddenly it's not so great, because being the boss means she's off-limits.

Here's the big part.

I'm respected, that's obvious. They consider me "on their level" which feels odd because in some ways, I don't know if they think that way about the other women there, but then again, I don't feel like a female to them?

Fancy that: a woman feels womanly to the extent that males desire and court her.

And lastly, her feelings on the matter:

I know I'm an attractive girl, I take care of myself, keep myself in shape, and I'm focused and bullish in business... It's just the most fascinatingly odd situation to be in, and it's making me doubt myself as a woman?

So she feels like a failure as a woman, because men don't want her sexually.

I've got some news for you. They don't want you, because you've made yourself more valuable to men as a source of money than as a source of sex.

As a business leader, your responsibility is not to breed, but to make sound business decisions so that everyone in your company can continue to profit and prosper. You've set aside your female role and adopted a male one: and big surprise, you don't get to enjoy the benefits of being female anymore. You are now a workhorse who's value is measured solely by your ability to succeed - just like a man.

Congratulations, you are now equal.

But this woman cannot separate her professional responsibilities from her feelings as a woman. She can't shake the feeling that she's missing out on something fundamental in her life, and it's making her doubt herself to her very core.

Women: as unpleasant as it may be to hear, you cannot have everything. There no package deal which gives all benefit and removes all drawbacks.

You can either be:

1. Strong, independent, respected and forever unloved or
2. Protected, provided-for, and subservient to the man who sweats and bleeds for you.

There is no middle ground. Make your choice and live with it.

Woman tries to frame cop for sexual assault. Too bad he was wearing a body cam.

290 upvotes | January 11, 2015 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

This is a reminder for all you gents of both the lengths that a woman is willing to go to avoid accountability, and the amount of power that our species' sympathy towards females gives her.

A drunk woman attempts to finagle her way out of a drunk stop, first by appealing to sympathy, then by making up excuses for her drunken symptoms, and finally by trying to frame the cop for sexual assault.

Now, the cop was interacting with this woman in a professional capacity, so the scenario itself has no direct relation to sexual strategy. But it does tell you about what a woman is willing to do to a cop, let alone to your own humble self...and one way that you might go about protecting yourself from a false rape accusation.

Higher number of premarital sexual/co-habitation partners in females increases risk of divorce.

Figured it was about time we started filling out the Science flair tag.

Here's a study that links higher sexual and co-habitation partner counts in women with higher risk for divorce.

<http://onlinelibrary.wiley.com/doi/10.1111/j.1741-3737.2003.00444.x/abstract>

From the abstract (emphasis mine):

Using nationally representative data from the 1995 National Survey of Family Growth, I estimate the association between intimate premarital relationships (premarital sex and premarital cohabitation) and subsequent marital dissolution. I extend previous research by considering relationship histories pertaining to both premarital sex and premarital cohabitation. I find that premarital sex or premarital cohabitation that is limited to a woman's husband is not associated with an elevated risk of marital disruption. However, women who have more than one intimate premarital relationship have an increased risk of marital dissolution. These results suggest that neither premarital sex nor premarital cohabitation by itself indicate either preexisting characteristics or subsequent relationship environments that weaken marriages. Indeed, the findings are consistent with the notion that premarital sex and cohabitation limited to one's future spouse has become part of the normal courtship process for marriage.

There Are No Shortcuts: Thoughts on "Social Proof"

294 upvotes | February 6, 2015 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

As you awaken from your Blue Pill coma, know this: there are no shortcuts.

Your years as a Blue Pill slave were your most unproductive. You laboured in vain, with no personal, heartfelt goal to galvanize your efforts. Perhaps you laboured for the sake of someone else - a nebulous corporation, or an exploitative boss, or a fucked-in-the-head woman who was happy to use you as her meal ticket.

But now as you awaken, you begin to understand that your life is yours to live. It is yours to live for yourself. And now that you're finally at the helm, you've got a lot of work to do. There are no shortcuts.

All those years of personal neglect have left you with a meager bank balance, or a fat ass, or poor health...or a soul-numbing unhappiness that's so palpable you once counted the reasons to kill yourself.

Solving these problems won't come easy or quickly. They took years to reach their current state, and they'll take years to fix. You won't get anywhere lying to yourself, or reaching for quick fixes.

Oh sure, around here you'll hear the old adage of "fake it til you make it". But don't grow complacent with the faking part and neglect the making - because that shit won't happen on its own. Real value - from monetary capital to sexual marketplace value - is purchased with SWEAT EQUITY.

It's time to nuke some misconceptions you may have about being a Red Pill man:

- Fucking a hot woman does not increase your value.
- Successfully reciting pick-up artistry like Casanova does not increase your value.
- Social proof does not increase your VALUE.

That last one might be a little startling, but it's true.

Do you know what social proof is? It's a shortcut for girls. It's a way for them to assess your value by watching how other people treat you - when they themselves don't have the time or opportunity to observe you in your element.

Social proof emerges from value, but it is not a substitute for it.

Social proof will get you to her bedroom for that first night's lay. But that image won't endure in the absence of real value. When the tide of hormones calms, and you're lying there naked with her, and with no friends to pump up your image back up, you will simply be the sum of your sweat equity up until that point.

Is your sweat equity enough yet for you to be proud of?

Make no mistake, this is NOT about letting women be the measure of your value. Don't count on the approval of women, or group laughs, or nodding heads to serve as the meter stick of your life's achievement. Women, and laughs, and nodding heads are fun, and that's what you use them for. Entertainment.

But don't mistake good feelings for value. You don't gain any more value from fucking a hot girl than you do from watching a good movie.

Herein lies the fundamental difference between pleasure (good feelings) and happiness (generating value).

The problems in your life stem from a lack of value. Value comes from work, and work is hard. If value were so easy to generate, then being a strong man would count for nothing. We'd ALL be chumps rolling over for the chance to hug a fat chick. Fuck that noise, you're awake, aren't you? You must learn to recognize and avoid the lure of quick fixes, because they fix nothing.

This is your mission now. And whatever your mission(s) are - getting ripped, starting your own business, building that muscle car you always wanted - they will only survive by the fruit of your efforts. There are no shortcuts, motherfucker. Grab that barbell, or those financial reports, or those power tools, and get to it.

TL;DR: Didn't you read the title? There are no shortcuts. Read the post, you silly bastard.

Long-Term Relationship Game Theory: A Beginner's Guide to Managing Your Bitches

795 upvotes | February 16, 2015 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

Preface

/r/TheRedPill has been talking a lot about long-term relationships recently. In response, I have created this helpful guide for newbies on how to manage your bitches by turning your relationship into a game she plays - winning prizes of intimacy for good behaviour, and getting punished with demotion or exile if she fails.

This guide will begin with some basic theory, describing why men are the arbitrators of relationships. It will then establish some common definitions and lay the groundwork for the strategy section afterwards.

As you read this guide, bear in mind that it is not meant to be absolute. It is a model that I've made which works for me. You are free (and encouraged) to modify any part of it to suit you. But for the most part, the principles outlined here should be fairly universal.

We say AWALT for a reason.

Two Disclaimers

1) *In order to make and sustain a prosperous long-term relationship with a woman, you MUST be comfortable with bossing her around - being a bonafide Patriarch™.

You don't have to be a master of your emotions yet. But at the very least, you must be willing to be firm with her, give her orders, and tell her "no", even against a flood of her tears.

A woman cannot feel comfortable in a LTR unless she feels like someone other than her is in control. That someone (naturally) is you.

2) *A long-term relationship CANNOT be your end goal. You can only be OPEN to the possibility of having one.

When you WANT a LTR, you place your focus on the idea of having a relationship rather than on assessing the woman herself (which is what you should be doing). You become fixated on your fantasy relationship and you selectively ignore the things happening right in front of you: her deep character flaws, her indiscretions, and the red flags.

Remember, women are candidates applying to be your girlfriend. Don't just hire someone because you want the position filled. Make sure you vet your candidates fiercely and hire the right one for the job.

This guide will help you do just that.

The Fundamental Principle of Sex and Relationships (FPoSAR)

This Fundamental Principle states that women are the gatekeepers of sex, and men are the gatekeepers of relationships. You should be familiar with it by now. If not, educate your ass here.

Beyond a man's Relationship Gate lies a paradise that every woman wants to inhabit. It is a magical realm where pickle jars are opened, spiders are squished, rides are given, appliances are fixed, cuddles are administered, encouragement is provided, and order is firmly established. And all of that takes time and effort.

As a man, your time and effort is your most valuable asset. You use it to get shit done. When time and effort is self-directed, it is used to accomplish Your Mission. When it is given to someone else, it is a tremendous gift which should be appreciated and respected.

Some men are too liberal with who they let through their Relationship Gate. They've got no border patrol, no review process. Just a country full of free benefits for anyone who crosses over. These are the beta-orbiters, and they are beset by every panhandling pussy that bats its attached eyelashes.

Some men are too strict about admission. They only issue temporary sex visas, and they end up deporting any woman without notice. These are the uninterested lone-alphas, and they have chosen their current lifestyle of banging and then flying solo.

YOU, on the other hand, are open to a LTR. Managing LTRs comes down to finding the right balance between these two extremes. You must giveth and you must taketh away in moderation.

You can achieve this balance by assigning "ranks" to your women and dividing your time among them based on the rank they have earned.

An Overview of "Ranks"

We use a lot of terms for describing a relationship with a woman: girlfriend, fiancée, one-night stand (ONS), plate, friend-with-benefits (FWB), etc.

But what do they really mean?

From a male perspective, each term implies a different level of investment in the woman - an investment of time, effort, emotions, and other precious male resources. As such, I believe they can be ordered in a roughly linear scale based on the level of investment they imply.

Here's a list that we will use (along with working definitions) ordered from least to greatest in terms of investment level.

Level 0: One-Night Stand -or- Pump and Dump. You throw a fuck into this girl and never see her again (unless she reaches out to you). It is a single encounter that is casual, sexual, and impersonal. You may or may not have met her before the encounter, and you may or may not even know her name. She is a one-time answer to a physical necessity - nothing more.

Requires no maintenance and a very low investment of time.

Level 1: Plate -or- Fuck Buddy. You have sex with this girl more than once. You will know her name and just enough about her life so you can schedule sexual encounters. You may also know a little bit about her personally, so you can help her rationalize being your fucktoy (if she's uncomfortable about the idea of being one). Otherwise, she's down with it and you're both satisfied with being casual. She is a temporary answer to a physical necessity.

Requires some maintenance and a low investment of time.

Level 2: Friends with Benefits. You have sex with this girl more than once - typically as often as mutual convenience allows, but perhaps even when it's not completely convenient for her (because she likes you enough to go out of her way). You also spend non-sexual time with this girl, like eating out or pursuing activities of mutual interest. You know more about her personal life, and she knows more about yours, and as a result the two of you exchange mutual, non-sexual favours from time to time. You will most certainly have good memories of non-sexual time spent with this girl, which will lead to positive emotional investment in her, making her more than just an answer to a physical necessity.

Requires moderate maintenance and a moderate investment of time.

Level 3: Significant Other -or- Girlfriend. The highest level of intimacy a woman can earn. You have sex with this girl often, usually more often than you do any of your other girls. You also spend a considerable amount of non-sexual time with this girl, resulting in many shared memories and a deeper emotional investment. At this level, there is significant mutual concern for the other's well-being. The girl in particular will feel a great dependence on your direct and involved guidance in her life (rather than simple stoicism and confidence). Emotions are strongly felt at this level: affection is especially sweet, and betrayal can be especially bitter.

Requires significant maintenance and a significant investment of time.

How She Plays the Game

The game itself is quite simple:

A girl begins the game at Level 0 or Level 1, depending on the context in which you two met.

If you met in a club, or began as total strangers grinding against each other at a house party, she's Level 0.

If you two met in a slightly more sociable manner - perhaps introduced by mutual friends, or she impressed you with her pleasant demeanour after you opened her at the local cafe, she's Level 1. She can also bump up from Level 0 to Level 1 if she reaches out and maintains pleasant and reasonable contact with you after your first sexual encounter.

From that point on, a woman must perform NON-SEXUAL services for you in order to advance in rank.

These services can include, but are not limited to:

- Cooking you a healthy meal. Either at your place or by invitation to her's.
- Treating you out some place. A restaurant or an activity of interest to YOU. Bonus points if you've never done the activity but it looks like fun - that means she's really thinking about you.
- Buying you a well-thought-out gift. Not just a random thing, but a gift which demonstrates an effort to understand your life and interests (example: therapeutic shoe insoles for a guy who likes running, or high-quality ear buds for a music-lover). The accuracy of her insight is more important than the cost.
- Hand-making you an artistic gift. These might include a picture or painting, a poem, a knitted scarf, a calendar of her photography, and the like. The more personalized the gift, the better. A hand-made gift doesn't have to be highly useful (since making useful things is tough), as long as the gift shows patience, diligence, and an attention to detail.

The greater her investment of time and effort in the gesture, the more credit she earns with you. Eventually, if she shows a consistent pattern of investing effort in you, she can advance in rank by one level.

The pattern should be obvious by now. A woman must invest time and effort in you in order to get your time and effort in return.

There's no concrete number of favours she must do to go up a rank, so use your own discretion and judgement when deciding how to reward her. But always observe Roissy's Fifth Commandment of Poon:

V. Adhere to the golden ratio

Give your woman 2/3 of everything she gives you. For every three calls or texts, give her two back. Three declarations of love earn two in return. Three gifts; two nights out. Give her two displays of affection and stop until she has answered with three more. When she speaks, you reply with fewer words. When she emotes, you emote less. The idea behind the golden ratio is twofold — it establishes your greater value by making her chase you, and it demonstrates that you have the self-restraint to avoid getting swept up in her personal dramas. Refraining from reciprocating everything she does for you in equal measure instills in her the proper attitude of belief in your higher status. In her deepest loins it is what she truly wants.

Giving her slightly less than she gives you is critical to maintaining your superiority in her mind. The material imbalance in this scheme is rebalanced by her hamster. Because your effort appears less than hers, she believes you to be her superior, and that she must continue to work in order to earn your approval and continued commitment.

A slow trickle of correctly-administered rewards will keep your woman happy and working for the duration of your relationship together. With dedication on her part, that relationship can be quite a long time.

Why Do the Services Have to Be Non-Sexual?

Simple. Because a girl doesn't have to exert any effort at all to have sex. This game only rewards effort with effort.

If she's pretty enough to appear on your radar, then she can get fucked just by showing up. Any random slut can satisfy the task of emptying your balls.

You should also remember this: sex is the most fundamental pre-requisite of any non-platonic interaction between a guy and a girl. You'll never find yourself in a situation where a girl is giving you gifts and cooking you meals, but NOT having sex with you. If sex isn't happening, then something is terribly amiss and you must either correct it or next her. Which brings us to our next section...

Punishment and Demotion

There are many ways in which a girl can make a mistake and upset you. Maybe she starches your shirts too much, or she burns the dinner she was making for you. These kinds of mistakes should not be punished with demotion because, despite her mistake, she is investing time and effort in you. You can think of a suitable punishment and repayment for your lost shirt without going to the extreme of knocking her down a rank.

Instead, demotable offenses should be offenses that are an affront to your dignity, your authority, or to the time and effort you have invested in her.

Offenses can be intentional or unintentional.

Unintentional offenses will usually come in the form of some indiscretion on her part, as she slowly loses attraction for you, her conscious effort wanes, and she slips back into her natural hypergamous state.

Some examples of unintentional offenses are:

- Unconsciously being too flirty with another guy (shit-test, can occur at any level).
- Failing to keep an important promise (usually by neglect or poor-planning), the consequences of which cost you a substantial amount of money or ANY amount of reputation (failing of respect, this offense will happen at Level 2 or above, since you don't entrust these matters to girls below Level 2).
- Neglecting some important duty that you have assigned to her (failing of respect, typically occurs at Level 3).
- Frequency of sex decreases, and she absently evades when you try to initiate sex (loss of attraction, can occur at any level).

Committing an unintentional offense should typically result in the demotion of the girl by one (1) rank.

Intentional offenses are far more vulgar than their counterparts. Intentional offenses are usually targeted shit-tests meant to re-assess your fitness. In some extreme cases they might even occur in the presence of friends and family, making them vindictive attacks against your reputation or dignity

Some examples of intentional offenses are:

- Consciously flirting with another guy, trying to arouse jealousy in you (shit-test, can occur at any level).
- Openly insulting you (shit-test, can occur at any level).
- Frequency of sex decreases, and she consciously and vehemently evades when you try to initiate sex or talk about it (loss of attraction, can occur at any level).

Committing an intentional offense should result in the demotion of the girl by two (2) ranks.

Committing a vindictive attack against your reputation should result in a loss of three (3) ranks.

Now, here's the important bit:

Once a girl has been demoted, her current level becomes the maximum level she can ever be. She can only climb the ladder as long as she is flawless in the execution of her womanly duties. Once she commits a serious offense, she is demoted, and she can never rise again.

A friend-with-benefits who remorselessly loses your expensive digital camera becomes a plate forevermore.

A plate who fails to provide sex drops to 0, and she is replaced by a plate who will.

A girlfriend who drunkenly humiliates you in front of your friends at a party drops to 0, and she quietly disappears from your life.

It may seem like some of these punishments are quite severe. But you must remember that hypergamy shows no mercy to the weak. The purpose of meting out such uncompromising punishment is to keep you in Abundance Mentality. With so many eligible bachelorettes out there looking desperately for a strong man like you, no single one of them is worth your grief.

An uncompromising approach helps you to avoid the risk of developing oneitis, and it prevents you from being manipulated by women who are all too good at tugging at your sympathy to get just one/two/five more chances.

"WTF Is This Shit", or Naturalizing the Process

At this point, you might be thinking to yourself, "What the fuck did I just read? What's all this ranks shit? That was dense, and abstract, and needlessly complicated. I'm not Alex fucking Trebek, I'm just a dude trying to find a decent girl."

The process certainly seems complicated when you write it all down.

What you should know: I like designing games. I like picking shit apart, finding patterns, and abstracting those patterns into discrete rules. And many things in life tend to work this way.

Like I said in my disclaimer, this is a model. Use any part of it that aids your understanding of human relationships. Substitute your own observations and rules if you think yours work better. If you think reading all this was a waste of your time, send me an angry message and I'll have some fun laughing at it later.

The greater your comprehension of human sexuality, the better a relationship you can have. And the more you practice it, the more naturally you can achieve your results. Don't tell your bitch "You're losing a rank for that shit!" Just drift away, disinterested with your relationship, and let her figure it out.

Focus on the human interaction and save the game theory for late nights with reddit and your favourite sock.

Not me, though. I may be a sock, but I ain't into that.

Final Thoughts

The key trait of the modern western woman is her absolute lack of concern for the desires of men. Our cuckold state has all but replaced men as husbands and providers, and so it would seem like the traditional relationship is basically obsolete.

Nothing could be further from the truth.

While a woman can subsist off the benefits paid for by our taxes, the government cannot give her the love, the attention, the stability, the masculine reassurance, and direct intervention that are so crucial to her emotional well-being. A woman feels vulnerable in a role of leadership, and she feels lost without a masculine leader to boldly claim responsibility for confronting all of the challenges that terrify her. No government can provide that for her. For that, she must come to us.

And for that, we must demand a price.

The purpose of this guide, and of the Red Pill at large, is not to effect social change on a broad scale. The broad scale is too distant and too nebulous to impact our personal lives in any meaningfully positive way - a fact that women are become all too aware of.

Rather, it is about finding pragmatic ways of improving your life quickly. Your life matters to you, and it is your duty to improve it.

You have more leverage than you may realize. Let this guide help you to capitalize on it - for your happiness, and for the happiness of any woman who works hard enough to earn your time and effort.

Bitch admits paternity fraud. Dude sticks to his guns, saving his life and future.

The highlight reel

We're both in our 30's and have just moved to a whole new city across the country a few months ago as I had been offered a much better paying job in an area that has generally lower living costs as well as it being a nice area to raise a child.

So this guy is a hard working STEM fella with fatherhood on his mind. Can't blame him. He's been sold the illusion that he can have a family and kids of his own.

she told me that while I was working hell week at the lab she met a guy during a night out with some work friends and one thing led to another and they ended up sleeping together.

But the woman can't handle being without attention for extended periods, so she seeks solace in strange dick. Never underestimate the importance of laying good pipe in your woman.

They want to be treated as sex objects, no matter how much their posters and burnt bras might suggest otherwise.

This carried on for a week or two supposedly because I was always working and not spending enough time with her (I worked 14 hour days during that time and just wanted to come home and sit.

Two weeks...

She mentioned how he lied about using a condom by saying he was using ultra thin ones and didn't realise what he did until she felt it.

...and she couldn't even be bothered to look at his dick?

Women will do anything to avoid blame, or to dampen any blame they can't avoid having assigned to them. And they'll use any brain-dead excuse that occurs to them.

Women will always try to squeeze your leniency and sympathy from you to avoid accountability.

Never let them get away with this.

I returned home the next morning and demanded we book an appointment for a prenatal paternity test, which she was initially very much against but eventually gave in and agreed. I booked an appointment that morning for the following week and I stayed with my mate until the day. I took the afternoon off work and drove us there in silence, aside from her crying and apologising, got the procedure over with and dropped her back and went back to my mates until results day. [emphasis mine]

Our hero does two things exactly right here: he calls the cavalry (paternity testing), and he distances himself from the bitch so she can't toy with his feelings.

A woman's manipulation can be insidious. She will try to twist your mind slowly, turning her defeat into a slow-won victory by attrition. She'll try to change your feelings, and thereby change your mind. Never let them get away with this.

The "quick update" section at the end is the piece de resistance, so I won't spoil it for you here. Enjoy it.

A corollary to tough love is tough consequences. For too long men have treated women like helpless weaklings in spite of all the turmoil, pain, and damage they can obviously cause as a result of their indiscretions.

Showing too much leniency is dangerous for you as a man, because if you can forgive one transgression, you can be made to forgive ANY transgression.

This is why my previous post about Managing Your Bitches uses a scheme of permanent demotion. Once you show any amount of leniency, all she has to do is figure out how to tug at your sympathy again the next time she fucks up. When that happens, she'll convince you to sell your Dignity As a Man and forgive even the most egregious offenses to your patronage.

Maintaining your integrity is priority one. Never humble yourself before a bitch...because the challenges of the world will never humble themselves before you. If you're not strong and resolute when shit comes looking for you, it will destroy you.

HumanSockPuppet's Guide to Managing Your Bitches

Good day, class.

This will be a recap (and expansion) of my original guide to bitch management. In it, you will learn how to manage your bitch(es) by turning your relationship into a game she plays - winning prizes of intimacy for good behaviour, and getting punished with demotion or exile if she fails.

Additionally, this guide will also cover:

- What it means to manage a bitch, and the challenges you will face
- Why bitch management is ultimately YOUR responsibility
- Relationship strategies for maximizing happiness and minimizing drama
- How to turn those strategies into lasting positive lifestyle changes

This guide will begin with some basic theory, describing why men are the arbitrators of relationships. It will then establish some common definitions and lay the groundwork for the strategy section afterwards.

As you read this guide, bear in mind that it is a model, not an absolute treatise. You are free (and encouraged) to modify any part of it to suit you. But for the most part, the principles outlined here should be fairly universal.

We say AWALT for a reason.

Disclaimers

1) In order to sustain a prosperous relationship with a girl, you MUST be comfortable with bossing her around - being a bonafide Patriarch™.

You don't have to be a master of your emotions yet. But at the very least, you must be willing to be firm with her, give her orders, and tell her "no", even against a flood of her tears.

Why?

Because ultimately, women get their behavioural cues from men.

Remember, women are children: mentally, behaviourally, evolutionarily. They are not like us. They don't think like us, or have the same deep sense of personal responsibility.

Even the most sociopathic man will intuitively know when he has crossed a boundary and offended another man. Whether or not he feels guilty about it is a different issue, but he at least knows he's done something wrong. Evolving this instinct was the key to a man's ability to either strategically make enemies or avoid unwanted conflicts.

Women, on the other hand, evolved no such instinct. On the contrary, women evolved the instinct to push a man's buttons as a way of testing his willingness to face conflict head-on (what we call shit-testing). A man who is willing to fight against her will also fight FOR her. Likewise, a man who caves before her will most certainly cave before his enemies.

This is why bossing her around is key. She is evolved to push the boundary by picking fights with you. So unless you are strict with your girl, she will become as selfish and insufferable as you let her get away with.

2) A long-term relationship CANNOT be your end goal. You can only be OPEN to the possibility of having one.

Men are the gatekeepers of relationships. Since a relationship is what you have to offer, you mustn't just give it away. It must be a reward she earns in small doses for inspiring your trust and devotion.

I understand that many of you want a LTR with a good girl – sometimes a series of flings isn't enough to fulfill you. Believe me, I sympathize.

But winning a LTR is HER problem, not yours. Handing a girl your devotion won't magically make her worthy of it. When you WANT a LTR too badly, you place your focus on the idea of having a relationship instead of evaluating the girl. You become fixated on your fantasy relationship and selectively ignore the things happening right in front of you: her deep character flaws, her indiscretions, and the red flags.

You must regard women as candidates applying for the job of being your girlfriend – a supporter, a lover, a comfort away from the everyday battles. Don't just hire a bitch because you want the position filled. Make sure you vet your candidates fiercely and hire the right girl for the job.

This guide will help you do just that.

3) This guide will be far less effective if you're already married.

As a man, your ONLY power in a relationship is the power to revoke your attention, validation, and your time by walking away – sometimes for good. It's the only strategy you have, but it's a potent one, and for a very specific reason:

You may want a woman, but women NEED you.

The problem with marriage is that it strips you of the ability to completely walk away. Sure, you can still get a divorce, but not without shooting yourself in the foot, possibly losing your children and a significant portion of your hard-earned assets in the process.

Our current social climate is not amenable to marriage. If you're already married, you have my condolences. If you're not married but plan on it, then you're a moron and you have no one to blame but yourself when your mistake comes back to bite you in the ass. And bite you it will.

Theory: The Fundamental Principle of Sex and Relationships

The Fundamental Principle states that women are the gatekeepers of sex, and men are the gatekeepers of relationships. You should be familiar with it by now. If not, educate your ass here.

Beyond a man's Relationship Gate lies a paradise that every girl wants to live in. It is a magical place where pickle jars are opened, spiders are squished, rides are given, appliances are fixed, cuddles are administered, encouragement is provided, and order is firmly established. And all of that requires a man's time and effort.

As a man, your time and effort is your most valuable asset. You use it to get shit done – most often shit that's related to Your Mission. When you give that time to someone else, it is a tremendous gift which should be appreciated and respected.

This is the key principle behind bitch management. You must demand that a girl appreciate and respect your time.

Some men don't demand respect for their time. They are too liberal with who they let through their Relationship Gate. They've got no border patrol, no review process. Just a country full of free benefits for anyone who crosses over. These are the beta-orbiters, and they are constantly beset by every vagrant vagina and panhandling pussy that bats its attached eyelashes.

Other men are too strict about admission. They only issue temporary sex visas, and they often deport women without notice. These are the uninterested lone-alphas, and they have chosen a lifestyle of banging and then flying solo.

YOU, on the other hand, are open to a LTR with a bitch – IF she earns it.

Managing your life and your bitches comes down to awarding her ONLY the time that she has earned.

You can decide just how much of your time a bitch has earned by assigning her with a “rank”.

Definitions: An Overview of "Ranks"

We use a lot of terms for describing a relationship with a girl: girlfriend, fiancée, one-night stand (ONS), plate, friend-with-benefits (FWB), etc.

But what do these terms really mean?

From a male perspective, each term implies a different level of investment in the girl – an investment of time, effort, emotions, and other precious male resources. As such, they can be arranged as ranks in order of how much investment each term implies.

Here is a list of ranks we will use (along with working definitions) ordered from least to greatest:

Level 0: One-Night Stand -or- Pump and Dump. You throw a fuck into this girl and never see her again (unless she reaches out to you). It is a single encounter that is casual, sexual, and impersonal. You may or may not have met her before the encounter, and you may or may not even know her name. She is a one-time answer to a physical necessity - nothing more.

Requires no maintenance and a very low investment of time.

Level 1: Plate -or- Fuck Buddy. You have sex with this girl more than once. You will know her name and just enough about her life so you can schedule sexual encounters. You may also know a little bit about her personally, so you can help her rationalize being your fucktoy, assuming she's uncomfortable about the idea of being one. Otherwise, she's down with it and you're both satisfied with being casual. She is a temporary answer to a physical necessity.

Requires some maintenance and a low investment of time.

Level 2: Friends with Benefits. You have sex with this girl more than once - typically as often as mutual convenience allows, but perhaps even when it's not completely convenient for her (because she likes you enough to go out of her way). You also spend non-sexual time with this girl, like eating out or pursuing activities of mutual interest. You know more about her personal life, and she knows more about yours, and as a result the two of you exchange mutual, non-sexual favours from time to time. You will most certainly have good memories of non-sexual time spent with this girl, which will lead to positive emotional investment in her, making her more than just an answer to a physical necessity.

Requires moderate maintenance and a moderate investment of time.

Level 3: Significant Other -or- Girlfriend. The highest level of intimacy a girl can earn. You have sex with this girl often, usually more often than you do any of your other girls. You also spend a considerable amount of non-sexual time with this girl, resulting in many shared memories and a deeper emotional investment. At this level, there is significant mutual concern for the other's well-being. The girl in particular will feel a great dependence on your direct and involved guidance in her life (rather than simple stoicism and confidence). Emotions are strongly felt at this level: affection is especially sweet, and betrayal can be especially bitter.

Requires significant maintenance and a significant investment of time.

Strategy: How She Plays the Game

The game itself is quite simple:

A girl begins the game at Level 0 or Level 1, depending on the context in which you two met.

If you met in a club, or began as total strangers grinding against each other at a house party, she's Level 0.

If you two met in a slightly more sociable manner - perhaps introduced by mutual friends, or she impressed you with her pleasant demeanour after you opened her at the local cafe, she's Level 1. She can also bump up from Level 0 to Level 1 if she reaches out and maintains pleasant and reasonable contact with you after a casual sexual encounter.

From that point on, a girl must perform NON-SEXUAL services for you in order to advance in rank.

These services can include, but are not limited to:

- Cooking you a healthy meal. Either at your place or by invitation to hers.
- Treating you out some place. A restaurant or an activity of interest to YOU. Bonus points if you've never done the activity but it looks like fun - that means she's really thinking about you.
- Buying you a well-thought-out gift. Not just a random thing, but a gift which demonstrates an effort to understand your life and interests (example: therapeutic shoe insoles for a guy who likes running, or high-quality ear buds for a music-lover). The accuracy of her insight is more important than the cost of the gift.
- Hand-making you an artistic gift. These might include a picture or painting, a poem, a knitted scarf, a calendar of her photography, and the like. The more personalized the gift, the better. A hand-made gift doesn't have to be highly useful (since making useful things is tough), as long as the gift shows patience, diligence, and an attention to detail.

The greater her investment of time and effort in the gesture, the more credit she earns with you. Eventually, if she shows a consistent pattern of investing effort in you, she can advance in rank by one level.

As previously stated, a girl must invest time and effort in you in order to get your time and effort in return.

There's no concrete number of favours she must do to go up a rank, so use your own discretion and judgement when deciding how to reward her. But always observe Roissy's Fifth Commandment of Poon:

V. Adhere to the golden ratio

Give your woman 2/3 of everything she gives you. For every three calls or texts, give her two back. Three declarations of love earn two in return. Three gifts; two nights out. Give her two displays of affection and stop until she has answered with three more. When she speaks, you reply with fewer words. When she emotes, you emote less. The idea behind the golden ratio is twofold — it establishes your greater value by making her chase you, and it demonstrates that you have the self-restraint to avoid getting swept up in her personal dramas. Refraining from reciprocating everything she does for you in equal measure instills in her the proper attitude of belief in your higher status. In her deepest loins it is what she truly wants.

Giving her slightly less than she gives you is critical to maintaining your superiority in her mind. The material imbalance in this scheme is rebalanced by her hamster. Because your effort appears less than hers, she believes you to be her superior, and that she must continue to work in order to earn your approval and continued commitment.

A slow trickle of correctly-administered rewards will keep your girl happy and working for the duration of your relationship together. With dedication on her part, that relationship can be quite a long time.

Why Do the Services Have to Be Non-Sexual?

Simple. Because a girl doesn't have to exert any effort at all to have sex. If she is attractive enough, all she needs to do to get sex is show up. Someone will fuck her if she makes herself available.

This game only rewards effort.

You should also remember this: sex is the most fundamental pre-requisite of any non-platonic interaction between a guy and a girl. You'll never find yourself in a situation where a girl is giving you gifts and cooking you meals, but NOT having sex with you (unless you're both a coward and too daft to read the signs). If sex isn't happening, then something is terribly amiss and you must either correct it or next her. Which brings us to our next section...

Strategy: Punishment and Demotion

There are many ways in which a girl can make a mistake and upset you. Maybe she starches your shirts too much, or she burns the dinner she was making for you. These kinds of mistakes should not be punished with demotion because, despite her mistake, she is investing time and effort in you. You can think of a suitable punishment and repayment for your lost shirt without going to the extreme of knocking her down a rank.

Instead, demotable offenses should be offenses that are an affront to your dignity, your authority, or to the time and effort you have invested in her.

Offenses can be intentional or unintentional.

Unintentional offenses will usually come in the form of some indiscretion on her part, as she slowly loses attraction for you, her conscious effort wanes, and she slips back into her natural hypergamous state.

Some examples of unintentional offenses are:

- Unconsciously being too flirty with another guy (shit-test, can occur at any level).
- Failing to keep an important promise (usually by neglect or poor-planning), the consequences of which cost you a substantial amount of money or ANY amount of reputation (failing of respect, this offense will happen at Level 2 or above, since you don't entrust these matters to girls below Level 2).
- Neglecting some important duty that you have assigned to her (failing of respect, typically occurs at Level 3).
- Frequency of sex decreases, and she absently evades when you try to initiate sex (loss of attraction, can occur at any level).

Committing an unintentional offense should typically result in the demotion of the girl by one (1) rank.

Intentional offenses are far more vulgar than their counterparts. Intentional offenses are usually targeted shit-tests meant to re-assess your fitness. In some extreme cases they might even occur in the presence of friends and family, making them vindictive attacks against your reputation or dignity

Some examples of intentional offenses are:

- Consciously flirting with another guy, trying to arouse jealousy in you (shit-test, can occur at any level).
- Openly insulting you (shit-test, can occur at any level).
- Frequency of sex decreases, and she consciously and vehemently evades when you try to initiate sex or talk about it (loss of attraction, can occur at any level).

Committing an intentional offense should result in the demotion of the girl by two (2) ranks. Committing a vindictive attack against your reputation should result in a loss of three (3) ranks.

Now, this next part is important, so pay attention:

Once a girl has been demoted, her current level becomes the maximum level she can ever be again. She can only climb the ladder as long as she is flawless in the execution of her womanly duties. Once she commits a serious offense, she is demoted, and she can never rise again.

Some examples of transgressions and appropriate punishments:

- A plate (level 1) who fails to provide sex on demand drops one rank to level 0, and she is replaced by a plate who will.
- A friend-with-benefits (level 2) who remorselessly loses your expensive digital camera drops one rank and becomes a plate forevermore.
- A girlfriend (rank 3) who drunkenly humiliates you in front of your friends at a party drops three ranks to level 0, and you quietly disappear and move on.

Now, I know what you're thinking. Permanent plate status? Walking away for good? Aren't these punishments pretty severe?

In reality, the offenses outlined above will generally only occur for one of two reasons:

1. You've slipped up in your duties as a Red Pill man and her attraction for you is beginning to wane.
2. She doesn't have the sense to recognize her unworthy behavior because of a failure of parenting that occurred long before you met her.

If it's reason 1, then you're at fault, and you're better off starting from scratch with a new bitch then trying to salvage a relationship that's on a downward slope. If it's reason 2, then the girl was never worth your time to begin with, and you simply didn't know it until now. You can't turn a ho into a housewife, so don't even bother trying to reform her.

In general, you must be uncompromising whenever you punish your bitch. Remember what we've already established: girls look to you for cues on what's okay. If you don't crack down on bad behavior when it happens, a girl's only assumption is that you are perfectly okay with whatever she's done. Hypergamy is selfish by nature, and it shows no mercy. Tough love is the only effective response.

There's also another benefit to being ruthless: meting out uncompromising punishment helps to keep you in abundance mentality. An uncompromising approach helps you to avoid the risk of developing oneitis, and it prevents you from being manipulated by women who are all too good at tugging at your sympathy to get just one/two/five more chances.

Keep your life drama-free by dropping troublesome bitches. With so many eligible bachelorettes out there looking desperately for a strong man like you, no single one of them is worth your grief.

Strategy: Naturalizing the Process

As you learn the rhythm of using rewards and punishments to keep your bitch enthralled, you'll develop an intuition for how to play your part of the game. The process will become second-nature to you. You'll naturally become bored with women who fail to show you the proper appreciation, and gravitate towards the ones who make your life more pleasant.

That's the ultimate goal here: to make you a natural. You'll never say to your bitch "You're a level 1 plate now!" or "You're going down a rank for that shit!" This system is for YOU – so you can have an abstract model with which to understand the game, until managing bitches becomes as natural to you as breathing or blowing a load on her face.

Final Thoughts

The key trait of the modern western woman is her absolute lack of concern for the desires of men. Our cuckold state has all but replaced men as husbands and providers, and so it would seem like the traditional relationship is basically obsolete – that women will never again need to concern themselves with OUR wants.

Nothing could be further from the truth.

Though a woman can subsist off the benefits paid for by our taxes, the government cannot give her the love, the attention, the stability, the masculine reassurance, and direct intervention that are so crucial to her emotional well-being. A woman feels vulnerable in a role of leadership, and she feels lost without a masculine leader to boldly claim responsibility for confronting all of the challenges that terrify her. No government can provide that for her. For that, she must come to us.

And for that, we must demand a price.

My hope is that this guide has helped you realize just how much leverage you have in the sexual dynamic – much more than you once thought. Let this guide help you to capitalize on that leverage – for the sake of your happiness, and for the happiness of any woman who works hard enough to earn your time and effort.

HumanSockPuppet's Guide to Teasing Bitches

1140 upvotes | August 9, 2016 | /r/TheRedPill | Link | Reddit Link

It's high time we discussed the matter of how to tease bitches. It's no exaggeration to say that teasing is the single most fundamental skill that you must master in your quest to become a pussy wizard of hallowed legend. But doing so can be a daunting task, especially if you lack the talent for wordplay or verbal improvisation that teasing often requires.

Fear not. The Sockpuppet has your back.

The truth is, teasing comes down to a simple formula...one which, once you internalize it, will serve as a solid framework for your practice of wordplay, and transform you into a prodigal panty-moistening predator.

The aim of this guide is to teach you this formula at its most fundamental level. From there, you will be able to add your own flairs and flourishes, developing a style that is truly your own.

Disclaimers

1) There's more to seduction than just teasing.

This guide will cover the verbal aspects of sexual escalation through teasing. But teasing, while certainly important, is not sufficient to get a bitch in bed. You must combine it with the other seduction essentials (such as kino, comfort-building, venue-changing, isolation, etc.) in order to bring home the lay. If all you do is tease and joke, then you're nothing more than a performing monkey, a clown.

Work on all of the fundamentals together, and combine them with teasing to effect solid game.

2) Teasing is best used on girls who don't already feel like they know you.

We all know that bitches have a dualistic mating strategy: they want the Jerkboy Alpha Sperm Donor to squirt a strong baby inside them, and they want a Dependable Beta Money Dispenser to foot the bill for their IKEA nesting instincts. The goal of teasing is to make girls rapidly identify you as the Sperm Donor so you can rustle their beef curtains ASAP. However, this is much harder to accomplish if the bitch has already mentally put you into the Beta category.

You should take this guide as a tutorial on how to quickly escalate towards sex with NEW bitches, or with bitches who haven't seen you in a long time (effectively giving you a clean slate to rebuild your identity). Of course, you could be a fag and use this on your long-time oneitis if you really wanted to - just don't be surprised when she becomes indignant with your sudden attempt to change categories, and the shit tests and shaming start raining down with biblical fury.

3) The hotter you are, the hotter the bitches you can successfully tease.

Sexual escalation from square-one means that first impressions reign supreme. Since humans use visual cues (fitness, fashion, posture, grooming) to make quick judgments, bitches will respond better to teasing if you look good. The higher your SMV, the higher quality of bitches you will be permitted to target. The limit comes when she thinks she's better than you. If she thinks she's above you when you drop your line, your words will hit a stonewall bitchface - you'll see it. This is a cue that you need to aim for lower targets for now and work on raising your SMV.

That's not to say that all bitches have the correct measure of their own SMV. Bitches can be broken. From time to time you'll run into bitches who are so self-entitled that no one short of George Clooney through a cocaine haze would have a chance. Don't get discouraged if you throw out a practice tease and some lower-level bitch shuts you down. It just means that turbocunt is overestimating herself (pretty common, especially in the West), and you can happily move on to a more well-adjusted prospect. Don't take this shit personally.

4) Never backpedal from a tease.

When you've spent your entire life treating bitches like Fabergé eggs, teasing and negging them may make you feel uncomfortable. You may feel a twinging instinct to smooth off your sick burn with a "just kidding" or some other man-boobed apology.

Do not fucking do this.

A strong man teases a bitch because she's in HIS domain, and he'll do as he likes. And a bitch is okay with being teased by a man she's attracted to because she believes in his power, and his playful repartee is all the assurance she needs to know he's on her side.

Don't ruin your powerplay by checking if she's okay. Women aren't THAT fragile, you fucking sexist. Administer your clam slam with the knowledge that your bitch will be grateful that you're in charge.

The Fundamentals of Teasing

Principle 1: Speak to women as though they are children - because emotionally, they are.

This should resonate with those of you who work with kids, have kids of your own, grew up with younger siblings, or interact with the kids of your family/friends.

When you speak to a child, they'll typically respond in one of two ways: either they'll grow increasingly excited and engaged, or they'll suddenly disengage into flat-out boredom. The two responses are so dramatic that it's impossible not to see it in their faces and body language. An interested child will smile, face you, fidget, bounce, paw at you, ask you an avalanche of follow up questions, etc. A bored child's expression will become flat, their bodies will droop, their eyes will immediately begin searching for something else to stimulate them, or they'll mutter an unceremonious "...oh" and straight-up walk away from you.

The way a child reacts to your words depends entirely on how you choose to speak with them and answer their questions. If you give them a long-winded fact-filled tirade that eliminates all mystery, they'll get bored. If you entice them with a vague but dramatic image that stimulates their imagination, they'll become captivated and animated.

Why is this?

Well, it's not because kids don't want their questions answered. It's because they have short attention spans and a burning desire to play and learn. Children want to examine new ideas via their imaginations, because fantasy is much more compelling than facts. Facts are the provenance of reality, of responsibility, of adulthood. They're not ready for that now. They want to fill in the unknown gaps with the spectacular.

The same is true of grown women. They have the same small passions and cravings for fantasy that children have - girls just want to have fun. Whether you believe the evopsych explanation for this or not is irrelevant, because you can speak to women as though they are children and observe first-hand that they respond identically to children.

This is why understanding children is a gateway to understanding women. If you can get good at holding the interest of kids, then you're just a short trip away from holding the same power over bitches. There's nothing that dries a vagina faster than a bland deluge of data, and there's nothing that moistens a vagina faster than a vague riposte that lingers on the edge of plausible reality and leans toward exciting fantasy.

Execution: When you're in seduction mode, don't talk to a bitch in pure information as if she were an adult. Instead, tantalize her the way you would a child. Be vague whenever you can, and leave the task of filling in the details to her imagination. She'll always make your stories bigger in her own mind than you could possibly accomplish as a boring fact-slinging braggart.

Principle 2: Use targeted disqualification to create tension and move in the direction of sex.

"Push-pull". It's a term that is nearly as old as the seduction industry itself. It's a classic tactic that builds sexual tension, sets fires to a woman's loins, and fills her little head with more questions than she could ever hope to untangle while on an emotional high. "Does he like me? What is he thinking? Am I winning him over? What's that feeling? Is this love? Oh my god, did I wet myself?"

Teasing is the foundation for creating a frame of push-pull.

A good tease should have several elements:

1) A good tease is an accusation.

Imagine you're a hotshot lawyer, and you're cross-examining this bitch. You've got no evidence against her, just a gut feeling that she's up to no good. If you want to bring this case home, you need to stir up her feelings and get a rise out of her so she admits her crime to the courtroom in a fit of passion. This is the frame of mind you want to adopt when teasing - remorseless, relentless, and in pursuit of righteous lulz.

2) The accusation should be something that is obviously false.

The implausibility of the accusation is what distinguishes a tease from a real criticism.

Example: If you try to tease a gymnast chick by accusing her of being clumsy, she might think you're leveling a serious criticism against her. Clumsiness is a real concern for someone in her trade. Your tease will come off as a mean-spirited exchange of facts. That will make you seem like a hostile, boring sperg with more interest in data than sex.

Instead, accuse the gymnast of being an obvious exhibitionist for enjoying those tight leotards a little toooooo much. Or ask her if spending so much time off the ground technically makes her an "airhead", cuz airheads make the worst girlfriends.

When it's clear the accusation isn't serious, that's the signal to her that you're inviting her to play. And by starting the game with her IMMEDIATELY on the defensive, you've established that she wins only when she has successfully qualified herself to you. You are both judge and prize.

3) The accusation should be something that, if true, disqualifies her from being a sex partner or girlfriend.

This is the push in the push-pull dynamic. An effective push makes a girl believe (if only superficially) that something she wants is getting farther away, and she must give chase if she ever hopes to have it. Girls want to have sex with and be the girlfriends/wives of dominant attractive men, so your push should disqualify her from these two things.

- Tell the whore carrying an armload of Coach, Louis Vuitton, Jimmy Choo, Tory Burch, and Yves Saint-Laurent shopping bags that you could obviously NEVER trust her to balance your joint bank account.
- Tell the slut who's begging for attention in the short skirt that her comprehensive discourse on anarcho-syndicated commune economics is too controversial for you to ever consider sleeping with her.
- Tell the well-read, smarmy, pseudo-intellectual classical-lit booknerd bitch that she could learn a thing or two from reading the sex tips column in Cosmo - and no cheating with Cliff Notes.

Bitches know that sex is the only real tool they have for keeping a man's attention. Tangled deep within their personal labyrinth of insecurities, they all KNOW this. That's why the less urgently you seem to push towards sex, the more confused and intrigued she will be. In the mind of a woman, confusion and intrigue are sexual hydrazine primed to send your dickrocket on a tour of her inner rings.

4) Be aware of your surroundings to avoid pre-emptively activating her defenses.

Regular people (i.e. people who don't come to the Red Pill for fucking dating advice like we losers) know instinctively that when a man sexually teases a woman, he wants to see her naked. This will backfire on you if you try to make a move in mixed company. "Mother hens", friends of hers that you haven't yet won over, boyfriends, and jealous beta orbiters will move to throw a wrench in your carnal designs, and they'll do it with a vulgarity that's nigh impossible to recover from gracefully - a punishment for your presumptuous gaffe.

If you are in such mixed company and you find yourself with an tantalizing opportunity to neg a bitch, dial back your tease to something NON-SEXUAL in nature. The other rules for negging still apply, but cutting out the sex angle will give you a measure of plausible deniability from interceptors, yet still provide you with the superiority and DGAF position you need when the time comes for the real sexual escalation. Save your sexy negs for when the group is comfortable with you, or when you've isolated the bitch.

5) Turn a successful tease into a long game.

There are two common signs that your tease has struck gold:

1. The bitch will respond with frantic amused denial as she tries (in her delighted disorientation) to ease you into a frame less tingle-inducing.
2. The bitch will respond with keen purposeful escalation, agreeing and amplifying your accusations in the clear direction of mutual seduction.

If it's case number 1, you'll be captain of this mission from start to finish, so take charge and steer it.

If it's case number 2, then your fucking job is done already. Move to isolation when the time is right and shoot your abortion into her.

Either way, once you land a successful tease, you needn't go digging for more unless the bitch needs some more warming. If that's the case, make your next tease related somehow to the first, and compound her two medium sized "flaws" into one big disqualifying whopper.

Then, take whatever invented character flaw you've disqualified her for and turn it into a running gag that you reintroduce throughout your interactions with her. Let it become a private in-joke between you and her, a shared experience around which you can stir up memories of good feelings and build a deepening comfort which is critical for seduction.

Execution: Make your teases patently-absurd accusations that disqualify her from ever being your lover or girlfriend. You initialize the game (fun), you set the frame with her as the pursuer (you are judge and prize), you create a push-pull dynamic to keep her reeling and feeling (drama), you keep the subject on sex (as a preamble to later events in the evening, provided she impresses you), and you make your intentions clear as day (no creep, all stud).

Teasing in the Larger Context

So, now you know the lowdown of how to tease bitches. With enough practice, you'll mix these principles into your own persona to create a surefire strategy for priming new lays.

But like many aspects of the Red Pill, teasing isn't all about giggling girls and early-morning underwear hunting. It has greater significance when you consider it in a larger context.

Teasing is a type of qualification. It's a strategy for enforcing your standards on women as a way of judging and filtering them. It's not the only way to enforce your standards, merely the method of choice when dealing with women specifically.

There are other, special methods for qualifying and categorizing men, depending on what function they will have in your life. The same frame of mind that you use to filter bitches will also aid you in filtering friends, allies, business partners, and even competitors. A strong, responsible man pursues happiness through thoughtful, critical choices of his social connections.

Take some time and think about the ways in which you qualify and categorize new potential friends. What makes a man a good friend? Or a good business partner? What makes a man trustworthy or untrustworthy? Could you break down your filtering process for men, the way I've done for bitches here today? In what ways do you presently enforce your standards? In what ways could you stand to improve?

These are all important questions for you to consider in the long term, because sustainable happiness depends on your ability to filter a good social network.

But that's the long term. For now, take the night off. Go forth, and let your teasing stir a chorus of giggles audible in the Halls of Vajhalla, where the brave may slay forever.

It is the fate of nearly every newbie to become obsessed with micromanaging his image. You see it all the time in askTRP threads: "How do I become more alpha?" or "Help, I think I may be beta and my girlfriend is losing interest". You even see it in the success stories, when guys talk about "finally feeling like Chad".

Don't get me wrong, it's great to have a victory under your belt, and you should be proud of it. It means you're moving past your initial inhibitions and towards real potential. But you're not out of the woods yet - you're surrounded by pitfalls that you can't even see.

What you shouldn't do is become fixated on the image that you're projecting to others. Be AWARE of your image, but do not become obsessed with it - because it is almost entirely a figment of your imagination.

I will begin this discussion with an illustrative parable. Then we'll move to the core theory. After, we'll discuss common roadblocks that RP newbies encounter and how to overcome them.

The Parable of the Boy with Many Faces

There was once a boy of many interests and pursuits. He was a lonely boy, easily bored, and often driven to flights of passion and inspiration.

The problem was, his pursuits were often mutually exclusive. He could not pursue all of them openly without them hindering or precluding one another.

He was an angry boy in search of a scapegoat for his life's frustrations, so he took to fighting.

He was a rebellious boy who liked to shake people's securities, so he took to rule-breaking.

He was a bored boy, so he took to ditching school.

He was a curious boy, so he took to experimentation - with science, and drugs, and girls.

He was a responsible boy whose family depended on him, so he worked a small job and made what little money he could to help out.

He was an only son to a good-hearted single mother, so he did as he was told when he was at home and never gave his mother any reason to worry.

He led a life with many facets. He was never untrue to his nature. He maintained these many facets by keeping them separate from one another. He never allowed the people in his different circles to mix.

From the boy's perspective, he had many faces. But to any single friend or family member, he had only one face - the particular face that he chose to show them.

What It Means

Clever little parables are great and all, but what the fuck does it mean?

It means you're full of your own shit.

To put it simply, you don't have a personality. There's no such thing.

I know it feels like you do. You are the only person who has constant, unrestricted access to the goings-on of your own life, and your own mind. You personally experience every laugh, every fight, every party, every frustrating ordeal, every heartbreaking tragedy, every embarrassing failure that has ever occurred in your life.

And you also experience (internally) every private thought, every unexpressed desire, every snide remark you keep to yourself, and every bout of fear that has ever seized you and kept you still when you felt like you should have acted.

For the sake of simplicity, I will refer to this as your internal perception for the remainder of this article.

You have built your internal perception of your identity around that collective experience. But here's the catch: your internal perception is accessible only to you.

Your friends' and family's experience of you is far more limited. To them, your personality consists only of those things you have externalized in their presence.

So, "you're full of your own shit" is about right.

What does it mean for you?

- "Personality" is an interpretation of your behaviour, filtered through the observer's emotional reaction to that behaviour. Each person's experience (and interpretation) of you might be different.
- You potentially have as many "personalities" as there are people who know you - a different interpretation for each person.
- To change your personality, all you have to do is change your behaviour.

The word "personality" is short-hand for "how I experience your company".

If you are making me laugh often, I think of you as a funny guy. If you always start complaining whenever we sit down to talk, I think of you as the depressing downer. If you're always hosting big awesome parties, I think of you as the outgoing guy with lots of social connections.

Incidentally, this is also why accusations that TRP promotes manipulation, insincerity, and disingenuousness are entirely baseless. Since no two people will necessarily have the same experience and opinion of you, does that suddenly invalidate both of their experiences? Whether those experiences were genuine or manufactured is a question unanswerable to the beholder. What they saw is what they got, and this is true for ALL interactions.

To think of all this in terms of another metaphor, imagine a hermit who lives by himself in a remote cave. No one knows he lives there, and he never makes contact with the outside world.

What is the hermit's personality?

The answer, of course, is moot. The concept of personality was developed as a social tool so that people could quickly describe one another. The concept has no meaning for a total recluse.

Internal Perception and Achieving Goals

Each man has limited power. He is but one man. Alone, he can only accomplish things that are within the scope of his abilities, his attention, and his time - all of which are finite.

But a man with many allies can potentially achieve the sum of all his allies' abilities, attentions, and time put together - provided he can inspire them to unify under his vision.

Alone you are weak. United with allies you are powerful. Nothing revolutionary here.

But this means that other people's perception of you is more important in achieving goals than your internal perception. You use other people's perceptions of you to inspire them to act for you, not your internal perception. Your internal perception is only accessible to you, and is therefore only useful in motivating you.

We realize, then, that internal perception is an unnecessary distraction.

At best, internal perception keeps you motivated and fighting for your goals. That's not strictly a bad thing, but you mustn't depend upon your whimsical emotional state to achieve your goals. You should be accomplishing that with discipline.

At worst, internal perception hinders your progress by sowing self-doubt in your thoughts, paralyzing you, and turning you into a validation-seeking addict.

Common Pitfalls of the Internal Perception

Alpha-Versus-Beta

One sticking problem with newcomers to TRP is their obsession over the Alpha-Versus-Beta "dynamic". They become obsessed with trying to micromanage their internal perception so that they can maximize alphaness.

This becomes an issue when their inward gaze is out of synch with external reality. They begin acting in ways that are incongruous with the situation, resulting in awkwardness and social ostracism - which they could have avoided simply by being more present and aware of their environment.

Alpha and beta are behaviours, and behaviours are TOOLS, not catch-all solutions.

When we talk about controlled, calculated behaviours, we are talking about strategies for altering your image in the minds of other people. But all this depends on you having an accurate read of your environment in the first place. If you don't know your environment, how can you predict the outcome of your applied strategies?

Solution: We say this time and again: The Red Pill is a tool box. To be successful, you must first identify the job at hand, and THEN select the tool appropriate for accomplishing it. Don't look foolish by bringing a waffle iron into the garage, or bringing an air ratchet to breakfast. Know the job, and know the right tool for it.

Confirmation Addiction

When a newbie is first learning TRP, he is still trying to make sense of how theory relates to reality. He watches carefully for signs and signals that he is doing right (or wrong) - and when he sees confirmation of the things he is learning, he feels a sense of satisfaction.

For many unfortunate newbies, they become trapped in this phase for a long time.

Witnessing The Red Pill in action can be enrapturing, and it can stop you from taking further action. You end up stuck in a cycle of baiting reactions and watching them unfold - all the while making no REAL progress in developing as a man or achieving your goals.

And sometimes, an attempt at baiting an anticipated reaction backfires. Things don't play out like you imagined they would, and you are denied your vindicating fix of confirmation. Your worldview is shaken, and you immediately begin trying to repair the crack, as if the foundation of your life were built on it.

This is another way that internal perception inhibits you. You are searching for a new identity to replace the old one you are discarding. But you need to constantly confirm it by testing it, to make sure you're not being deceived again. An understandable response, but it's a treadmill - you're moving your legs, and you're not going anywhere.

You must stop using "learning" as a rationalization for your confirmation addiction, and you need to work towards your goals. If you haven't even decided on a goal yet, then your confirmation addiction might be why.

Solution: Focus on action, and trust that Red Pill theory will be just as right tomorrow as it is today. You can be confident that you are not being deceived because this time it is YOUR goals you are working towards. Approach the application of TRP theory like a scientist, and return to the theories which work best for the type of goal you want to achieve.

The Left-Field Compliment

Has anyone ever complimented you, and the compliment confused you? Perhaps it felt undeserved? Or maybe it never occurred to you that someone might admire you for that reason?

If you have experienced this, then it is a perfect example of someone else's perception of you disagreeing with your internal perception.

Now, have you ever complimented someone for something, and they had a lukewarm response to your admiration? If you've never experienced this, then let me tell you - it doesn't feel good. Here's why:

People are constantly projecting. When a person expresses admiration for you, what they're really saying is "I'd like to be more like you".

How shitty is it to then tell them that their aspirations are not significant? Pretty fucking shitty.

Solution: Understand that a compliment is a window into a person's perception of you. That's a valuable piece of information, and you should never punish them for giving you such a gift.

Learn to accept compliments with grace. A simple thank you is sufficient. Then take what they have taught you and use it to gauge your reputation in your community, and figure how it can get you closer to your goals.

Furthermore, spend more time on taking action. Maintain only enough awareness of other people's opinions to help you avert social disaster. Otherwise, barrel forward, and let your actions and achievements speak volumes about the kind of man you are.

Bringing It All Together

Personality is a figment of our individual imaginations, given life and substance by our collective interactions. Personality is real, and it is also a fiction. It's important that we understand that, whether truth or fiction, the creation of a personality is prompted by action, and only action.

Therefore, actions are what matter most, since actions are the only things which have effects and consequences.

You are a prisoner of your own mind. You will never be free of the temptation to default to your internal perception, especially when you're stressed and exhausted.

Just remember that your internal perception is as much a truth, and as much a lie, as anything else.

Whenever you are in doubt, always err on the side of taking action.

HumanSockPuppet's Guide to Training Bitches

Introduction

Here at The Red Pill, we have an enduring respect for The Natural Order. We respect it because we are products of it. Far better than fighting an impossible battle against it, we explore its realities so that we can understand and fully embrace what we are. Men are nature's designated risk-takers, innovators, and pathfinders, so it falls upon each one of us to master our environments - geographical, social, and sexual.

So, what is the Natural Order? It's an amused master male sitting atop a pile of fawning bitches who are gently cupping his balls, while the unchosen, unwashed masses of unworthy males look on with scorn and envy.

It takes time, practice, and exposure in the field to develop your intuition and become just such an amused master. And what our conversations here at The Red Pill have thus far lacked is a concrete guide on how to seize the minds and hearts of bitches and make them into your property (in all but legal terms).

That's why Maestro SockPuppet is here with another helpful guide - this time on the subject of Control Game. Whether you're an out-of-practice misogynist looking to dip back into regular pussy, a total fucking RP noob, a long-time lurking coward who's too afraid of offending women, or just part of the special needs section of the class, this guide will pull back the curtain on the real politics of male social dominance, and help you become the kind of benevolent misogynist that bitches crave to be belittled by.
